VAN KOETSVELD, C. E. Das apostolische Evangelium. Aus dem Holländischen übersetzt von D. Köhlschmidt. Leipzig: Jansa, 1904. Pp. 166. M. 4.

This book was written by a Dutch pastor to edify the Christian public of Holland. The author says in his preface that the church of that country is divided into three parties: orthodox, who cling to the traditional Calvinism, and are concerned with defending the authority of Scripture, the deity of Christ and the Trinity, the sovereignty of divine grace, and the need of regeneration, also original sin and an expiatory atonement; the adherent of the "modern theology," which claims that to find Christianity one must go back of the apostles to the religion of Jesus, but which really finds its support in the "divine in man," and derives all religion from man himself; and a third section, which feels the need of a divine gospel, and finds this want satisfied by Christ, but does not cling to the letter of Scripture, nor holds the claims of science to be invalid.
